Did you know?

Berlin has 175 museums – that's more museums than it has rainy days each year! The German capital has over 50 theatres and 300 cinemas.

Question time !

In Berlin, which international event presents its winners with a Golden Bear award?

○ A ski race? ○ A film festival? ○ A ballet competition?

Answer: A film festival

Museum für Naturkunde Berlin

If your family is fascinated by all things prehistoric, the Berlin Natural History Museum is somewhere you won't want to miss! Here, you can admire the skeletons of dinosaurs including a brachiosaurus (from the Jurassic period) or an archaeopteryx fossil (an extremely rare bird). The museum also houses a collection of meteorites and stuffed animals.

Hurray!

Don't forget to bring your torch! Once the Museum has closed its gates, visitors sneak through the dark exhibition halls, torch in hand. On their search for the different animals of the night, they explore the museum's exhibitions (from age 8, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, 6pm or 8pm, €15.00 for 90 min)

Extavium

This interactive museum invites children and adults alike to embark on an extraordinary journey to the heart of science. Here, you can experiment with anything! Overseen by researchers, children can carry out their own experiments, understand how the brain works and create their very own tornados! This vast laboratory covering an area of 1,500 m² is entirely dedicated to helping children and teenagers to understand science by building photovoltaic cells, practising kitchen chemistry, making a mouse maze, and more!

Filmpark Babelsberg

The Babelsberg film studio complex, located on the outskirts of Berlin, invites families into the wings of cinema and television studio sets. Meet film-set painters, plasterers, make-up artists and find out all their tricks of the trade. Several workshops are also on offer for children: the witch's house from "Hansel and Gretel", a jungle playground, Janosch's 'Panama' fantasy world, and more! Here, fun and entertainment are guaranteed for the whole family!

Zoo Berlin

Berlin zoo was founded in 1844 and covers an area of 35 hectares. It is one of the world's largest zoological gardens, with more than 1,500 different species. Here, you can discover a number of extremely rare animals, including birds such as the cassowary, the condor and the harpy eagle. Promoting the reproduction of endangered species, such as Przewalski's horse, is also one of the zoo's specialities. In 1913, the Berlin aquarium – Germany's largest – was opened within the zoo grounds. Small children will love the Streichelzoo ('petting zoo'), where they can take a close-up look at farm animals, including goats, geese and donkeys.

Computerspielemuseum

This museum, created in 1997, is entirely devoted to computer games! Rediscover your favourite heroes, such as Zelda or Lara Croft, in 'nostalgia' mode. The museum also has a large collection of consoles, some of which date back to 1951! Aside from lots of fun, this museum also promises visitors a different take on computer games, exploring their impact on education and society, for example. It also provides an opportunity to find out more about how computer games are designed, from screenplay through to graphics.
